In your honor, I'll have a Boddington's ;) Although I'm pretty partial to Shiner Bock.

Wow, great service here - a Boddington's in 15 seconds! :laugh: Now I'm up for some darts.

(PS - thanks for the comment. I have to pass on some of the thanks to JDN who reminded me of this idea, which I had forgotten until he mentioned it.)

Ok, here's an idea, we each start a discussion (can be about anything, just like in the pub!) and give our reply here in the pub:laugh:

Here's mine

Aside from music gear, what are your 3 favourite possessions?

Is that you with an op1, Neil? :)

As I recounted in another thread, I've recently been treating the wife to the entire 2 seasons of Space 1999 and there was an episode where one of the crew was in the sick bay with some kind of electronic device on his chest while he was writhing in pain. As you can see in the picture.

My wife turned to me and said "Oh my god, that looks just like you with your Octatrack in bed!"

Hard to deny.

Heheh, of the two us he's the actual musician, as in can play bass and guitar and sings...or at least isn't as afraid to sing as I am. He finds the way I make music completely mystifying but ultimately interesting, he doesn't really have a frame of reference for a lot of what I listen to, or the stuff I make - he's huge into Bruce Springsteen, classic country/Americana, rock stuff. The other day he bought the Dio best of and the X box set, so he's exploding me to new thing too! Lol

We're not married, but i'd be more surprised if we did not get married than if we did. We're a good match on a lot of levels. Don't feel weird posting it here since he only ever uses the iPad to read the hockey blog and watch post game interviews, not hang out with the nerds. :)

He's in afghanistan for work (journalist) and I miss him terribly. Being here in the pub with the pens-wings game on is nice. :)

I like that he's exposing me to other kinds of music. I listen to w mix of things, but I always default to the usual electronic suspects. Although today I listened to rock and classical at work, so it depends on my mood.

He's a hard one to pigeon-hole.

Part gothic horror, sometimes political/social satire. And in his "Iain M Banks" guise, brilliant but (for me as a non-scifi fan) a little impenetrable sci-fi author.

And whisky aficionado. All-in-all, a legend :D

i did. i own both. life aquatic definitely gets better the more you watch it. i saw it in the theater and was speechless at the end of it. not because i thought it was amazing, but because i had no idea what to think about what i had just seen -- i had never seen a movie like it. now i think it's really funny. and sad. but really funny.

how about you?

i saw darjeeling as well, but couldn't get into it as much. bottle rocket of course is hilarious. . . rushmore i think i need to see again, but that's a very "boy" movie.

The Dark Knight

The Royal Tenenbaums

Kill Bill vol. 2

Yes!!!

(preferred Vol 1)

let's count then as one movie and both be happy! =)

The Dark Knight
The Royal Tenenbaums
Kill Bill vol. 2

Royal Tenebaums is an absolute classic. Did you like A Life Aquatic too?

i did. i own both. life aquatic definitely gets better the more you watch it. i saw it in the theater and was speechless at the end of it. not because i thought it was amazing, but because i had no idea what to think about what i had just seen -- i had never seen a movie like it. now i think it's really funny. and sad. but really funny.

how about you?

i saw darjeeling as well, but couldn't get into it as much. bottle rocket of course is hilarious. . . rushmore i think i need to see again, but that's a very "boy" movie.

I know exactly what you mean. Massive expectation after RT which left me feeling a bit flat with Life Aquatic but it definitely warms on repeat viewing. Bottle Rocket - brilliant. Never really got Rushmore. Darjeeling just gone on my 'to watch' list.

I tend to like quirky stuff. Pretty much every Coen Brothers film. Stuff like Welcome To Collinwood, Buffalo 66, foreign films.

Blimey!

Well it used to be Ian Banks for non sci fi and Ian M Banks for Sci Fi, same bloke different styles.

Now it's just Ian Banks for whatever style.

For non Sci Fi read the Wasp Factory everyone should, it's wicked.
For SciFi I'd say Transition or Surface Detail.

Surface detail for instance goes into people living their lives in virtual realities, ie their soul uploaded into (computer) memory - the creation of hell in virtual reality, and inhabitants being subjected to it. for instance.

Totally!

What many people don't know about Battle Of The Planets is that it was quite different and dark in it's original (Japanese) form but much of the edgier stuff was cut for British TV and the gaps were filled in with that 7-Zark-7 nonsense.

I think I am late too... but its early here in Cali!!!

I am from San Diego, so naturally I am going to drink a very hoppy beer that is considered by the locals as hardly hoppy at all but makes most people from other places get the pucker face.

I think I will start with a Ballast Point Calico Amber ale, and if that don't do it and I am not to lazy I'll hook up the other tap (kegerator!! B)) and try my latest homebrew... some weird dry-hopped roasted brown IPA thing.

Now to attempt to catch up on the pub talk by reading this gargantuan thread!

Wakey wakey!

Pint of moonshine please.

I'd like to meet Jimmy Hendrix and the Buddha, ideally at the same time. :) Oskar Schindler as well.

Going back to an earlier question I'd like to build a lottery number prediction machine but I would probably keep the details and patent to myself. :) Or perhaps something more useful would be a really good and cheap alternative to fossil fuels, say nuclear fusion or something like that. That way your still made for life but your doing something positive at the same time.

Ok, here's my question: Do you still go out clubbing? If so, how often? Do you miss the heyday's? And for you when where they?

Nostalgia trip central.

Yeah, I'm sure yr right, I was a little bit too young for the dancing in fields official era (gutted) but still managed a fair few unofficial parties in fields around the 1999-2002. Still not the same though.

favorite movie - I don't know if I could really label it my favorite, but I could watch 'Dazed and Confused' all day long.

Started going out '98 and partying in mostly Chicago, Minneapolis, Madison, and Milwaukee area, but I did have a lot of good times in Boston and Seattle. Now I'm in Northern California, and partying has been limited to bookings and friends playing. I'm just not a fan of a lot of the music going around these days, but I guess that's something that happens when you get older. ;)

Being in the 40+ age, partying for me is pretty limited. Adult sensibilities, the working week, family responsibilities and so on, however, I have an agreement with myself allowing me to let my hair down once or twice a year.

This year for instance I have booked tickets for Amon Tobin gig in London, and a 3 day festival in Cornwall. This festival is aimed at a reunion of a club I used to go to 20 years ago, and as such the acts and the music are generally classic in nature. Last year we had Jon da Silva (original hacienda dj) and Shades of Rhythm doing a PA!! it was class and gives older acts an opportunity to keep their hand in. This year we will have Andrew Weatherall and Justin Robertson - how wicked is that! kept to a maximum capacity of 400 people and everyone camping in a private zoo! Awesome stuff.:)

I came to it from djing in plymouth, not that I was a great dj or anything, early licensing hours = many parties = many dj's. Left Plymouth and became a hermit in Suffolk, was surrounded by loads of Hiphop heads in Suffolk, loads of breakers and scratch dj's, acid jazz drummers and skaters - odd for a predominantly agricultural area, but a great melting pot of goodness - this is mid nineties.

Whilst i liked the general vibe, i didn't dig the hiphop so much, so I would end up in my room playing around with cracked ACID(software) on the pc and just dicking around trying to be FSOL. Wasn't till I came to London (2000) and was earning decent money that I splashed out on ableton, bought a keyboard and started to learn about sequencing and synthesis. Bored myself with ableton built a x0x, bought a 101 and an ER1 and had a ball. Sold the ER1 and 101 and got and MNM. Put myself into debt with the MDUW ;-)

I think its a latent childhood, or a mid life crisis (but a really good one)

Doing music? maybe someday I wil complete something or do something worthy, until then its more being like my dad in a shed speaking to a bloke in Belgium on his shortwave radio transciever, a lonesome hobby.

Re:Join me in the pub!

House, pretty much, was never into hardcore, had an excellent club there called Cultural Vibes - it was just about the music, and it was house. We are talking '92 so the quality can be a bit varied we are talking Cowboy Records, UMM, Roberts Records, Eastern Bloc that stuff.

You?

Re:Join me in the pub!

Posted by coldfuture - 2011/03/23 07:32

I grew up with techno in the southeast of the US. Started going out to strange acid house nights that were all mixed up with goth culture in 1989. I've held residencies as a DJ on and off since 1992.

I don't get out much these days, but I am still tuning in when I can. :)

Re:Join me in the pub!

Posted by darenager - 2011/03/23 07:34

Heh, I never managed to get DJing, I used to buy tons of records though, starting around 87/88 with all the early acid stuff - armando, bam bam, phuture etc then a bit later the early detroit stuff, bit of house, never got into Jungle or DnB when that hit.

Of course way before in like 82/83 I was into the electro, especially stuff like Newcleus, Man Parrish, etc. I think that stuff was a prelude to the rave scene for most people:laugh:

Yeah! I love those early years, I kind of lost interest a bit around 94 when it became all MCs and a bit tired.

Ah yeah. Over the drink here we had a bit of a renaissance because thats when UR really took off and Mills and Hood defined techno more personally for themselves. Things we kinda CRAZY at that point when Minimal Nation and The Bells came out... all that UR, M-Plant, Axis/Purposemaker stuff was sooooooooooooo mindblowing at the time. And now!

Cheers, it was the first time I used it with midi-cv driven by the monomachine, so just a test pattern but I thought it sounded ok so decided to make a video, the irony though is before I started rolling, the modular was sounding way better, but during tweaking I could not remember all the settings, oh well:)

I know what that's like! The "ah hell, why didn't I just turn on the recorder" sinking feeling. I've got a Fantom X, which has to be one of the most despised boards around (a bit unfairly IMHO), but it has this great feature of always sampling the outputs. So when you get that random moment of brilliance and then that after-the-fact rush, you just hit this button and you got it. There oughta be a law requiring this on every samplerB)

Started going out '98 and partying in mostly Chicago, Minneapolis, Madison, and Milwaukee area, but I did have a lot of good times in Boston and Seattle. Now I'm in Northern California, and partying has been limited to bookings and friends playing. I'm just not a fan of a lot of the music going around these days, but I guess that's something that happens when you get older. ;)

Ditto. After all the Even Further parties, combined with Karma in Chicago, it all seems passe these days.

I think I still have some of my even further fliers! I heard that there's a documentary coming out for those parties and the little further one. Drop Bass shows were pretty outta control on the Satan worship side, but always interesting.

I think the rave'em and bailey shows are what ruined me, though. I might still have my documentary for that one somewhere. The last one with, I think, 298 acts and 7-10 areas over 3 days spoiled me too much.

my paia fatman has been hated on, but it's a great kit and one of the cheapest analogue mono synths that I can think of. I run it through some old effects and I always get usable sounds, and it's small enough to comfortably travel.

Drank a very smooth nutty brown ale.

Plan for tomorrow, drinking a flying dog raging bitch.

black river falls, Wisconsin? I heard that the owners were pissed after the last party.

I'll never forget Superstars of Love with tink-y-winky and big bird on stage at rave'em. That still ranks as one of the most entertaining shows I've ever seen. Video work all around from that whole weekend is what got me into including video into my sets (or at least failing at it for the next five years). Video's much better now that I've dedicated more to hardware live and have a laptop synced to run video.

Lol - that is entirely your business! Everyone has a different story and a different kind of life (even within families). I sometimes think about not working, and ive decided that I would have to have some kind of commitment everyday or else I would just laze about and squander my time.

Hehe yep, it is tempting to sit about wasting time, but I'm always busy doing something, long story short - I used to work 60+ hours a week busting my balls, then one day enough was enough, we had a son, and I was leaving for work before he was awake, and by the time I got home he was asleep, for that and a few other reasons I quit my job, moved out of the rat race into the coutryside, bought a business, and now spend more time with my family. Never been happier, the business is staffed (its a shop), so I just do a bit of admin stuff.;)

Hehe yep, it is tempting to sit about wasting time, but I'm always busy doing something, long story short - I used to work 60+ hours a week busting my balls, then one day enough was enough, we had a son, and I was leaving for work before he was awake, and by the time I got home he was asleep, for that and a few other reasons I quit my job, moved out of the rat race into the coutryside, bought a business, and now spend more time with my family. Never been happier, the business is staffed (its a shop), so I just do a bit of admin stuff.;)

That's beautiful. It's probably my age, and being a guuurll!?! , but I think about the family and children thing quite a bit. I've made some choices within the last few months that have put me in a better position to not be forced to have to choose between family and work. I don't want to be important, I want to be happy. :) sometimes work gets in the way of that, and there is so much pressure to choose work - subtle sometimes, but its there. No more!

I kind of did the guy thing of putting my lady off, next year - all that sort of thing, and really that was pretty dumb of me, because having kids is not the big upheaval guys tend to think/fear it is, and I totally love being a dad.

You're a smart cookie, happiness trumps all. Money is important to a point, but some things money can't buy, life is a short dance, no rehearsals. Being important is over rated, been there done it, it is easy to feel pressured into doing the done thing, but sometimes take a step back and look around.

If your guy is down with having kids, and you feel its the right time, go for it. If he's not down yet and he's the right one, tell him from me it's the best thing he'll ever do;)

Tell me to shut up if I'm talking out of turnB)

My wife and I are thinking about having kids, but we have certain goals to achieve first. 1.Buy a house (we're in the process of that right now and have just had an offer accepted). 2: start my wife's business, but before we do that we need a house. Seems like kids are right around the corner.

Tonight, slummin' it and drinking some UV vodka with crystal light before seeing my friends who are putting on the DJ Dan show. I hate this time of the month when it's crunch time at work and will be forced to stay out until 3am.

I can't wait to have my own place. I've had my own apartments for over a decade, but it's going to be great to be able to do some demolition and construction without getting into trouble from the landlord. I have so many plans for the upstairs and how I'm going to set up my studio.

Got in the pub early for a spot of binge drinking... I cant help it Im from long eaton.

Missed the pub talk due to my need for sleep: 8 hours, always. Anyways, I suspect some are out at real pubs but Im going to rewire the studio with a few bottles of ale: started on the jaipur IPA, now on the kelham pale rider. Things are going to get real wild: patchbays and hops. Lliving in the coutryside has been good: Im too far away from anywhere to be distracted by clothes, fun, beer and so all of my disposable income has gone into the studio, my time into the boxs. Good times. Will change soon as moving back to a town: exchanged contracts on the house we are buying yesterday, hurrah!

Hoping to squeeze in a couple of bike rides and some music time. Im not too porductive at the minute, just playing around and learning in the time I had. One of my tunes came on in the car earlier and I was amazed I managed to get it together: Ive forgotten.

=====

Re:Join me in the pub!

Posted by Thomas - 2011/03/26 05:15

Ok. I think its still abit buggy. Couldnt get the scene changes to work. Not the pattern lengths either.

Think im gonna use the Arranger as "training wheels" when practicing live shows. hehe.

=====

Re:Join me in the pub!

Posted by darenager - 2011/03/26 05:19

Yeah I'm really looking foreward to the scenes working in arranger, I wonder how it will be implemented, i.e whether the fader position can be stored on a step, that'd be dope!

=====

Re:Join me in the pub!

Posted by Thomas - 2011/03/26 05:23

I think it just select scenes for you automatic. Would be cool with some crossfader recording option though. Even if its just writing p-locks on each step. Instead of doing that parameter by parameter, track by track.

=====

Re:Join me in the pub!

Posted by tIB - 2011/03/26 05:26

Im avoiding the arranger: song moded myself out a while back... not ready to go back there just yet.

Cheers mr ager, he'll be alright and its going well.

Downhillng is fun, done a little bit a while back though couldnt now. Im just cross countrying a little, trying to work a sweat and see some countryside: got a little route planned for tomorrow if Im feeling it in the morning. Miss the feeling of exercise, good for the soul. Stupidest idea ever is to start boxing if I can get the wrist up to strength.

Re:Join me in the pub!

Yeah. I like the adrenaline i get when doing downhill biking. But after i got a girlfriend, i havend been that active. Been used to have all this "free" time, and suddenly i couldnt just do what i wanted all the time. hehe. Or spend my money on what i want to.

Ahh, Nils loured me into buying my first eurorack modules btw! Ive been telling my gf how smart it is to buy a modular synth. Since i can just buy one module at a time, so im not gonna spend that much money. hehe. (I think im fooling myself more than i fool her.)

Darenager: Yeah, ive been looking at that one. Pretty feature packed! Always good in a small system. I have an kenton pro solo, so gonna use that at first. I imagine it would be so cool in combination with the OT. Just making a loop on the modular. Sample, then make something different on the modular. :)

so i tried to find out wtf> he's like i'm just in bed, this is my bed and he refused to leave. so i'm ushering him out but he keeps trying to go back to bed. then he starts walking around telling me he lives here! i offer to call him a cab, or he can stay the night for $50 (with free coffee) he walks out into the back in his socks, i got his shoes then he steps onto the street. then he pissed on my gate.

Btw, is the UK Elektron users meet happening?

=====

Re:Join me in the pub!

Posted by tIB - 2011/03/26 06:39

Its looking unlikely for me personally, got an op coming up which will put me out of action for a while in the summer. If someone goes for organising Id do my best, though planning the thing is out the window for me this year.

Im banned from vintage, unless its an akai vx600 or an xpander, neither of which Im likely to find, or buy if I do. I had the chance on a vx a couple of weeks back- one came up in aware in OZ when I had cash. Too much though, especially with import tax.

There's an A127 on MW right now, always fancied that- 3 resonant bandpass filters... someone tell me its crap before I try to make room...

EDIT: and be warned again: I dont even care about the new shit coming out, still GAS over all the lovely older stuff... mostly frac stuff now.

Re:Join me in the pub!

There was an Akai ax 60 for sale in norway last month. I was abit interrested, but rememberd the last 80Å's synth i had. Roland HS 60. Juno 106 in an hideous color, and built in speakers! I really dont know why people like that synth. I still remember my disapointment when i first tried it.

Thanks for the warnings. hehe. I dont even want to know what frac has to offer. Its gonna be hard enough containing myself in the euro world.

tIB when's the op?

You don't need that A127 - I had a MAM RS3 similar concept to the A127 (I think Juergen Haible designed it, based on the Korg PS3100 IIRC) and whilst it was cool not really an everyday thing, good for bringing movement to pads and stuff, and funky vocal shit - but surely you got that covered with other stuff?

Cheers my man, yeah as long as the music keeps on going and I still have money Im happy: Im a problem solver, so I view my setup pragmatically, filling in gaps as I go. Got to a point where Im probably a soundsource or two too heavy, and possibly a little light on effects... though the synth that pushed me over also has a tone of DSP effect processing, so Im balanced again.

Been thinking about getting out the bass guitar and laying down some Octatrack material.

How long is your live set going to run?

who else is a beer lover?

tonight i'm indulging in a boulevard smokestack series "nommo" - belgian dubbel style.

http://www.boulevard.com/wp-content/uploads/2011/09/Brand_Nommo_Dubbel.jpg that and the octa, monomachine and microwave XT = big moon grin some other favs:

boulevard harvest dance & tank #7 brooklyn brewery sorachi ace, local #1&2 la fin du monde
black IPAs of various ilk duvel delerium tremmens hoogarden franzskanner
sam adams lager malheur dogfish red&white it's like synths. i can usually find something i like in all of them.

this is a 40+ page thread about good friends, beer and synths. it is now a STICKY!

:beer:

Oh, yeah--that Smokestack series is no joke. I'll do a Delerium Tremens now and again. I usually go dark like Lagunitas and Rasputin, spicy like a jalepeno, and generally the higher-end Rogue stuff. I like coffee stouts, and choco stouts the most but will suck down a Hop-Slayer anyway. For the clean and crisp I'll drink a plain old Peroni.

Lately I've been enjoying every single beer made by one of our great local breweries--Great River Brewery! Oh, and Bent River's as well. We have several others, but...

Check out they're doings--!!!!

:beer: :backslap:

PS...just saw you had the Delerium listed. The others you listed can't be missed either!

B)

I start every jam session with a little liquor lovin'. In my most recent youtube video, I started with a Great River "Hop-A-Potamus", and listed it in the credits!!!

nice! that would go quite well with my great river preamp B) speaking of local... 512 brewery in austin is throwing down some quality, and san antonio's ranger creek oatmeal pale ale has been stimulating my lobe lately...

:beer: :beer:

I'm from the midwest area, so when I go up north to the Twin Cities, I do the 8:00am Saturday beer tour at Summit breweries. Totally different right outta the silo. Here's one for ya...I'm from where Will Ferrell came to visit and did that beer series...

Thanks! Nah, not yet-- still getting my chops together and I'm holding off for the looperupdate. I'll probably be at a brewery though--since they're more open to whatever. Plus, you can't really take that rig to the hood.

There's this place called Ribco or Redstone Room, and I've got an in at both--but won't attempt to perform until I get a little more comfortable with some of the quirks on startup.
