I take it that it's only digipro:wave and doesn't include the digipro:beatbox.

"final glory"
Five tracks used. One pattern. It took about three takes to get it right.
The .syx is forthcoming.

I love the DigiPro.
I love the monomachine.

Any questions? Just post here.

Nice work.
The 'far away' lead between 00:58 and 01.44 hrs is fucking brilliant.

Monomachine rules. Period.

I called this waveboy, based on a drone sound with my nice clicks that i make with an lfo!!

5ch wave, one rev.... mostly using 2waves+the rev.... then i just tweak+jam....

Yay!

I made another one:

<http://www.elektron-users.com/modules/wfdownloads/singlefile.php?cid=166&lid=741>

I used a similar kit and "remixed" the pattern for "final glory". This is like part II or something. I'll upload the .syx soon.

I think it shows that the monomachine is a very flexible instrument and allows ones true creativity/personality to shine through. I've heard complaints that the MnM's parameter set for each machine is limiting, but this is clearly not true. Congrats to everyone who entered. Now, off to vote!

The poll is closed! I want to congratulate Glitched on winning withhis "Final Glory" entry. I also want to thank everyone who submitted to this round of Science Labs.

I think this round of the Labs may have had the strongest entries we've seen to date, or at least in a long while. Congrats to you all...the next Labs will be posted next week.
