#2: Noise into filter sweeps.

part 5. analog drum sidestick sounds.

part 6. layering em up.

+1

I tried one : <https://soundcloud.com/takadoum/a4-drumkit-example>

Unfortunately, the kick is oversaturated after soundcloud upload :(
I tried several times, lowering the recording level, but I can't get it right once uploaded.

Any idea ? At home it sounds perfect, no saturation at all. Maybe some kind of hidden defect in it which causes this on soundcloud ?

EDIT : I must add that I don't have any monitors, just a good stereo and good PC speakers with subbass, so I might miss something.

Is the general conclusion that can be drawn from this that the A4 is not a natural drum machine?

If you mean by this that the machine doesn't sound like real drums, I totally agree, and its main purpose is much more like electronic sounds.

If you mean non natural drumming or feeling, I don't agree, but in this example, yes, you're right ;) Actually you really can tweak the patterns to sound like humanized drumming, the sequencer offers many possibilities, and you can also play with LFO and envelopes and parameter locks to alter the pattern and make it more alive (timing, ghost notes, decays, ...).
What I haven't done in the previous example ; it was only meant to show a drumkit example.

Sorry, yeah, i didnt mean that as a dig at any of the sound samples you guys posted!

I ment, i love analog drum sounds, and if the A4 could easily do some convincing drum synthesis AND some tasty synth lines it would be a serious solo beast indeed.

My oppinion so far:

when I listen to the demo sounds of the Elektron A4 I dont think it is meant to be a drum machine at all...I wish the boys from sweden would provide us with better drums in their presets to learn from.

But if any decent at least cr78ish sounding drumsound is made by at least 2 voices I can answer my own question. You can do drums, even really nice sounding ones with the A4 but its definately not a drumbox or in any way specialized in creating drums.

PS and still I would like to be able to recreate a CR78 sigh

Here are some drum sounds from the A4, the squelchy lead is only to fill in the spaces.
