
Could never have pulled this off without this community!

Posted by HighSage - 2013/09/05 06:55

I consider this to be my pinnacle elektron moment, performing live with Octatrack, Machinedrum, and a x0xio in So Cal. This is something I know I could have never done without dozens of you here, providing insights, tricks, workflows and more over the years... will miss you all and see you on the other side! For now, though... THIS IS YOUR PUNISHMENT!

Good stuff and good sounding mix for a live performance. Are those all internal Elektron effects?

Shagghie really lays it all out & brings it home here - if you love this sort of sound (as I do) you're pretty much not gonna hear it done better than this... cheers for sharing Scott. B)

There's a boss pedal on the x0xio, and an Eventide Space on the main outs of the OT (The OT is the mixer for the MD and x0xio). Out of the Space, and into the house mixer. Everything else is elektron internal effects on which ever part is being effected, and some CTRL-All stuff on the MD of course. The most important part is the Stone Brew... that is all over everything in the mix! :-)

Awesome man.... can't wait to hear this. I know how that feels when you get close to a release...it seems the last 10% takes 90% of the time. Hang in there! heh.

You certainly waste no time with this one, straight into the wormhole :D This inside a huge warehouse at 4am would have been magical to say the least! 7 minutes in now :evil:

Damn... my dated mac won't let me stream stuff from bandcamp anymore:(I guess I'll just have to purchase this and listen to the whole set during my commute.

I watched the YT clip, awesome stuff:)

Top notch acid!!!!

Cheers,

Mike

Ah, so that was you over the weekend! Greetz, and thank you for the support! I took two videos of two live tracks over the weekend that will part of my next set. One's a remix of my Angel Trax release on Detroit Underground, and the other is a tribute to Rob Hood... I'll post em up here in a sec. How did was your commute? ;-P
