
EU Album: MACHINE

Posted by tIB - 2009/12/15 14:42

Here is a quick run down of the key information for those who may have missed anything so far:

What it is the Machine project:

We decided to put together an album to celebrate the community, our music and the gear we make it on; machine is the result and the concept the album is set around.

How many tracks will there be

Fifteen, machine... they rhyme so thats set. :lol:

Who can join

Everyone registered at elektron users is both welcome and encouraged to submit; post counts, join dates or experience doesnt matter, we just want your tracks.

How to submit:

The deadline for track submission is the first of April... there will be no extensions so dont be an April fool and miss out (sorry couldnt resist).

When is it coming out?

Relaese date is July the 1st 2010

As well as throughout this thread there is further info in the following threads and downloadables:

Track names: http://elektron-users.com/index.php?option=com_fireboard&Itemid=28&func=view&catid=13&id=75968)

Concept : http://elektron-users.com/index.php?option=com_docman&task=cat_view&Itemid=30&gid=19&orderby=dmdate_p ublished

Collaboration: http://elektron-users.com/index.php?option=com_fireboard&Itemid=28&func=view&catid=13&id=76043

Now, on with the thread, if you are intersted in contributing keep reading...

.....MACHINE.....

.....CONCEPT IN BRIEF.....

We have decided to lose the idea of linking the Elektron machines to nature and "green"™ issues, because they do not have a strong connection to Elektron as a company or to us in the context and usage of our Elektron machines. Within the concept we need to have a theme common to all Elektron users and a credible connection that really links us to our Elektron synthesizers and the music we make with them. This connection is Machines.

With the working-title "Machine"™ we refer to our Elektron machines, but also to the wider metaphor of the machine.

The generic and simplified usage of the single word machines belies the immense impact machines have had on every facet of our civilization and, in this case specifically, our music. It also opens the concept up to endless interpretation; the compilation can be interpreted to be about Elektron machines, machine as collaborator/facilitator or machines as catalyst and muse for a fundamental restructuring of society (see introduction text).

We hope with this kind of multi-faceted concept that the compilation can simultaneously be an album for us as elektron-users, and also something for non-elektron users that are interested in electronic music or possibly our community.

For a more detailed overview of the machines concept, including suggested track names, please refer to the Machines downloadable.pdf in the files section.

(Here: http://elektron-users.com/index.php?option=com_docman&task=cat_view&Itemid=30&gid=19&orderby=dmdate_published) collab thread here: http://elektron-users.com/index.php?option=com_fireboard&Itemid=28&func=view&catid=13&id=76043

.....The criteria for track submission are simple:.....

â€¢ Since we are an Elektron forum, these machines should feature prominently in the track. Letâ€™s celebrate these machines that have brought us together as a community. The use of other manufactures machines is allowed, though the track selection committee will be looking for tracks that are â€œElektron loud and proudâ€™.

â€¢ Collaboration is encouraged, since we are an online community of many artists we would like to encourage people to make links with other artists on the forum in the creation of any work submitted. While collaboration is not compulsory, again the track selection committee will be looking for work that has been born out of this approach.

â€¢ All work must be submitted no later than the 1st of April. There will be no extensions to this date under any circumstances. Following submission we are working on a tight timescale for selection, mastering and subsequently release.

.....PLEASE DIRECT YOUR TRACK SUBMISSION TO THE FOLLOWING ADDRESS:.....

.....machines at brownspace dot net.....

Please send in mp3 format, nothing above 192kbps. If your track is selected we will need a higher quality master. If there are any issues with uploading please PM Kirlian.

Please use iTunes or another program to provide all relevant details and tagging. We will need your iTunes tag, real name, collaborators (if there are any) and gear used. Feel free to include additional information such as a brief overview of how the track relates to the concept and/or selected title.

The projected release date for this project is projected on the 1st of July 2010. At this stage we are aiming for a digital release with donations going to an as yet undecided charity, the track count will be no more than 15.

I hope you are as excited about this project as we are,

tIB and Kirlian

Many thanks to the concept team comprised of Toni, Nils and Liveseq for their fantastic work in consolidating and distilling a tremendous amount of information to find what we feel is a concept very relevant and dear to our Elektron machine hearts. As we all know, pleasing all of the people all of the time is an insurmountable task. However, after reading through the concept they have created with the forumâ€™s contributions, I think they might have done the impossible: Iâ€™m sure you will agree that the end result of their hard work has given us a fantastic starting point for this project. Thanks again to all of you!

not really, although the 6 minute or less range is probably a good target.

we'll keep the reminders flowing so even the most sincere procrastinators will have plenty of prompting and hopefully time to get their tracks in.

I would actively encourage collaboration on this, as was said the selection committee will be looking for this during the track selection process... its a great way to work and a good way for us to get as many names as we can on a 15 track compilation.

Ill create a collaboration thread for people who wish to find collaborators... of course, you don't need to state your aims there and if you have someone in mind go ahead and shoot them some PM.

Oh and thanks for your youtube offer Daren, will no doubt hit you up on that in the future... feel free to remind me nearer release time.

after reading and enjoying the .pdf, i would like to say :beer:

really enjoyed this phrase word pattern:

... piano in the corner of an old room is as much an emotional portrait as it is a machine designed to produce certain tones with the aid of mechanical hammers and metal strings.

The electronic music machines address our emotions in very much the same way, because that is what they are: machines to express ourselves and invoke emotions in others.

Hey, thanx for the support. If you are interested to participate in album by doing a track, you are very welcome to do so. We'll be announcing the final call for tracks later and info how to submit your track. After that it'll be jury vouting for tracks that will go to album (about 15 in total). So, as we have said earlier, it's open for everyone (elektron-users of course).

i have some great four-bar audio clips although they are only interesting for sixteen bars.

this online collaboration label - <http://wemixseries.com/> - would be interested to know about the Machine release. i have not submitted any of my four bar audio clips for their online free compilations, although from most of the emails, the organization seems to be simply to release electronic dance music.

fairly inappropriate mention i guess, in that many elektron users will not be in the dance music genre, thought i would mention anyway.

Is there a percentage of Elektron required? I've got a tune where the SidStation plays a sweet role that brings the tune to a whole new level, yet also has guitars, vocals, acoustic drums, accordion, etc, I'm guessing it probably wouldn't jive with what will be mostly electronic tracks?

No, there is no any percentage of Elektron required. How would we even determine that, anyway. We dont want to make any rules how people would have to use their machines. Besides that, music is a liberal art, so anything might go (we'll have jury voting for final tracks). As this is a compilation with the defined concept, I would advice to take a look at the concept and think what would fit it well (read the involved threads). Machine doesn't imply all electronic tracks at all, but music should follow the concept in some ways. This is very liberal too, you are the artists, you'll find ways. :)

nothing was specified due to the emphasis on collaborative work... if you have two really strong tracks that you have made for the album (with the concept in mind etc) then by all means put them both in.

Sorry for the somewhat silly question, but can I just confirm when the deadline is?

I can submit tracks on the 1st? or do they have to be in by the first? The only reason I ask is due to the massive amount of work I have due around the same time. :S

This one will be coming down to the second. :cheer:

Also... I live in Sydney. So, it's the 1st of April 18 hours or so earlier than say California.

(but seriously, it says on the banner on the home page that submissions must be sent before April first. Now, the time zone is a good one, and I would guess that your point is totally valid. But I wouldn't stretch my luck by sending it truly to the last minute (read last day))

Re:EU Album: MACHINE

Posted by kirlian - 2010/03/28 06:35

@trondc yes you can send in two tracks tron. 2z the limit though .

i think considering we've had about 4 months to work on this stuff, and that we really want to maintain objectivity and anonymity during the voting process, tracks you have already submitted and that may be recognized as yours are discouraged.

that said, it's likely that a good number of those on the voting committee will not be able to identify a track of yours they may or may not have heard in passing on EUsers at some arbitrary point over the last couple of years. so... your call.

we are looking for quality, elektron loud and proud, and conceptual approach.

if it was made with an elektron machine, we'll take it. there was no rule stating it had to be made specifically for the machine project. obviously some connection to the concept would be preferable, but in the end, it's just an elektron music compilation made from love and for a good cause.

Few questions:

When do we find out the results?

If our track doesn't make it I hope it's cool to post it online or do what we wish with it?

If our track does make it can we post a clip and a link to buy the album on our own sites?

Has a charitable organization been chosen?

I like the idea a lot. There are an endless number of ways we can do this, with a new theme for each release. Personally I like the idea of exchanging sysex'es and remixing.

I think it's important to work on the marketing though. Not saying we haven't done that now, just thinking that we're putting a lot of time and effort into this, so it would be a shame if it doesn't reach out to a larger audience.

A similar project is being cooked up at the Serge quadslope forum btw. It looks to be a semi-annual release, possibly published through tunecore.com.

Re:EU Album: MACHINE

Posted by Nils - 2010/03/31 17:07

Sorry to hear about several people here not being able to participate. So I'll reiterate Mr Kirlian's words; if you have a quality track ("Elektron loud and proud") that you haven't used for other projects/releases, we'll take it!

The MACHINE concept is wide, with a lot of possible interpretations. Go through the list of suggested track names, and try to make a connection between a fave track of yours and the concept.

Here's the concept again:

http://elektron-users.com/index.php?option=com_docman&task=doc_download&gid=533&Itemid=30

And here's the thread discussing track names:

http://elektron-users.com/index.php?option=com_fireboard&Itemid=28&func=view&id=75968&catid=13

Now get to it! Millions are waiting for this much anticipated release from the world's best forum! :drums:

I think posting winning tracks on each artist's soundcloud/virb/bandcamp page (with NO download option), along with a link to purchase would be easy marketing.

I could also see this project getting some attention on Reddit; there is a modest electronic music community there and in general charitable feel-goody things get upvoted.

Ok. Quick and dirty question.

I had a collab with a forum user. We made two tracks together.
You will receive both with our collective nickname.

Now. As a solo project, I have some other track to submit.
As Buromaschinen I made like a hundred tracks with the machine theme in it (nomen omen!). Feels weird not to post some of these too, moreover I developed and tweaked em thanks to this forum so they kind belong to it.

Tib told me that two tracks for user are fine, and, as a collab, we're already done.
BUT, is it inappropriate to send more under a different artist name? :side:

Jims Computer Beats, Koshimazaki, Nils, Kirlian, tiB, LiveSeq and everyone else have done a lot of work to make this happen, and there are still things to do. Re:EU Album: MACHINE

First of all GREAT WORK everyone.

Tib Toni and K, you were already legendary to me, but now I will engrave your names (along with victorjohn's, but that's another thread :P) on my machines.

Photos to follow soon.

Then.

If it was me I would wipe everything on my ipod, copy the 60 tracks and start an endlessly looping playlist.

Maybe I would want to listen every track thousands of times, while I'm drawing, while I'm on the bus, while I'm cooking or while I'm relaxing, letting the music go again and again.

When I could remember each track, bit by bit, waiting for that melody to come, for that bridge to start, well that's the moment I can actually make a voting.

Of course a decent set of speakers are very important to catch every subtle frequency or the very low bass frequencies, but getting used to the tracks feels the most important goal to me.

Don't you think?

If I only was one of the judges I would go this way, for sure.

:)

If it was me I would wipe everything on my ipod, copy the 60 tracks and start an endlessly looping playlist.

Maybe I would want to listen every track thousands of times, while I'm drawing, while I'm on the bus, while I'm cooking or while I'm relaxing, letting the music go again and again.

When I could remember each track, bit by bit, waiting for that melody to come, for that bridge to start, well that's the moment I can actually make a voting.

Of course a decent set of speakers are very important to catch every subtle frequency or the very low bass frequencies, but getting used to the tracks feels the most important goal to me.

Don't you think?

I do think! and that is the plan, at least for me -- listening in the living room through the ipod/receiver combo, in the studio on the monitors for the stress test, and on the ipod on the metro ride and walk to work.

60 submission IS a lot, but looking at the names in the other thread, it's old and new people, so it should be interesting!

^ all the info on concept and everything else is in the first post in this thread.

The concept doc is here: http://elektron-users.com/index.php?option=com_docman&task=doc_download&gid=533&Itemid=30

EDIT: May have misread that Makko... track info should be edited into the files in the properties if people did that. One thing we realised about this is that we should have had an upload form so we were able to get that down... hindsight is a wonderful thing.

I mean information about the tracks. How people approached the concept.. gear used. blabla..

we ended up with 73 tracks, very few of which included the track information in the tags like we asked for in the criteria for track submission on the first page of this thread.

itunes track information/tagging window actually provides a pretty comprehensive "submission form", but surprisingly, very people used that method. instead, i got .txt files and tons of emails with all the info in the email and so on.

What it amounts to is that some people followed the instructions, some didn't. I went the easier route- which I to say I stuck with the original submission requirements to determine what to include or not. I may collate all of the email and additional txt files I got and put them in a text file for those interested, but my idea with going the simple route was to let the music speak for itself, and those who followed the submission guidelines would have the benefit of their track information being included for those interested. at the moment, it would have taken me at least another few evenings to collate the information on the tracks that didn't include it in the tagging, thereby delaying the voting process even longer than it has been.

a good number of people included zero information as well. there are some tracks that have a title and and acronym for identifying information and nothing more.:laugh:

not to knock anyone... the music is awesome and i am overjoyed that so many fine musicians chose to submit. thanks again.

let the cream rise.... riiiise to the top.

Certainly, the lucky few whom appear on the compilation should describe how they made their tracks.

I had some information in the ID3 tags, but had to re-encode at the last moment, so that info was lost.

Oh well.

I had the exact same thoughts. Lots of samey, albeit good, IDM & glitchy tracks. It will be hard to pick out the ones that stand out in a pool of 50 in the same vein. :S

Re:EU Album: MACHINE

Maybe you guys should limit the amount of glitchy tracks?

Sure have that style represented but not let it take over the style of the album.

We should look to try and give as broad a sonic/style range as possible of which these machines are capable of?

I remember when I bought the first compilation album and thinking it was too much in the same vein, more diversity this time please.

I too think we should keep this from being an Autechre/Venetian Snares tribute album.

There are quite a few tracks in here that go way beyond that aspect of the Elektron boxes, and that's really what's exciting to me - they're really adventurous without losing sight of the musical imperative.

I think that, as stated in the pdf that every voters received via email, we shouldn't be talking about the votes/tracks/etc on or off EU's website. Let the voters do their job and decide by themselves which tracks they think are of the highest quality, fits the machine concept's best. Please don't try to influence other voters. (I know that no tracks in particular were mentionned. I just think it would be best to not talk about dissing a particular genre. The voting process was decided by Kirlian and tIB and we should respect it). Thanks,

I actually did a lot of data entry for mine using Itunes but almost all of it disappeared from the one in the zip file, plus the names were replaced with someone else's. The latter is understandable for anonymity but it's too bad that all of the info I typed in got nuked. No biggie but oh well :side:

it would have been highly preferable for you to discuss this with me in private. in fact, i still hope you will. i certainly didn't intend to nuke your information. i was going for anonymity. and are you saying i changed the name of your track? i cross checked these 73 tracks 5 times to make sure that didn't happen. PM me with your concerns so we can straighten them out asap.

with a project this size, fallibility on some level is almost guaranteed, as is general dissatisfaction with some part of the project by some cross section of the population.

we've done our best to make this thing happen and however we arrive at the end i am sure it will ultimately reflect positively on the smart and talented people that comprise our community here.

and for the record veets, the track your collaborator sent me was very well tagged but it was all related to WHO did what on the track, so i removed it. if your track is selected the relevant details will surely be included.

Ditto (about the samey IDM stuff), I was wondering if the same group of people collaberated in different ways to get more tracks in even. That said, there were a few of theise noise experiments that really stood out above the rest anyway. Note that I withdrew from the voting process as I'm swamped and I'm already going to be handling the mastering of the project. However curiosity got the better of me so I quickly needle dropped through all the tunes. I saved my favorites, deleted the rest, and surprisingly I ended up with 15 tracks saved. Good stuff though, more than anything I'm curious to hear how people made these tunes so I'd love to see that info required from the winners.

Attention machine voter peoples!

Thanks for your input so far... there's one last task for you if you are able... check your email for instructions.

Basically delays with mailing out to people are due to votes being tied for a number of tracks, the machine voters have been mailed out with a new set of instructions.

Selected artists will be mailed/PMed for their masters on or around the 11th of may, by which time we should have the final 15 tracks nailed down.

It says a lot about the quality of submissions that voting has been this difficult: once again i ask for your patience with this and will re-state that as yet no one has been asked for a master copy or informed of their success.

for those of us on the facebook....

should we make an EVENT PAGE or whatever is comparable for a release date???!

that way we can collect all those interested for the actual release? plus, people that sign up will show friends they signed up and THEY will find out.

i'm not a facebook expert, nor a lead on the project, but this sounds like a good idea.

let me know!

peace

p.s. tib, i hope mr indigo got a hold of you! :D

Nice!

If I was on Facebook, I'd definitely be on that group. :)
Nice work guys!

i put up a post on the ableton board with the bandcamp preview.

i also requested a FEED on resident advisor...but they have to ok it.

i'm trying to think of other places we can TAG!?!?!?

hi all: this is fantastic work by all!

but being a grammarian and general pedant, I noticed two spelling errors:

one here:

<http://machineproject.bandcamp.com/>

'by elekton-users' at the the top of the page.

And another here:

<http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=123626064341832> where email address is given as:

eleketron.users.machine@gmail.com

just so you know.

^ took me about 3 minutes to figure what was wrong with the last one! Cheers for those :)

We're working on a project guide to share with other forums with closer to the date... when that is ready Ill set up a thread asking for it to be shared on any other sites you people frequent. The idea is that as well as a bit of advertising for us it gives the other forum a resource they might use.

i thought of starting another thread...but.....

here's a thought:

what if we allowed all sysex for the project to be available for remixes?

stares at brainstorming pad

Its a great idea and one that has come up before...my take on it is that we should have asked for the sysex upon submission of tracks.

By all means feel free to chase folk up for this and we could drop it in the files section... In my case the sysex for my track is long gone...

noted: WHEN we do it again we'll have to add them!

although, when the dust settles, for the record, i'd love to play around with some outside sysex files.

sysex cheater. :oof:

patience, JD. everyone who is working on the project is doing so of their own volition and is sacrificing their personal time to work on it with no recompense. it will get done.

you know it will be announced with much fanfare as soon as it is finished. =) hey folk,

as you have all figured out, we had to put it on hold for a minute. this project is 98 percent complete and it really does sound fantastic.

there is no way we would keep this from the world without some valid reason, and such is the case. in light of that, and PLEASE, without turning this thread into an outpouring of support thread, do keep actual in your prayers/meditations/thoughts.

as i said, this album is done. you will have it in your hot little hands imminently. thanks for all the support and understanding. :kiss:

yours,

the machine team

Yes, I agree and want to repeat for everyone, that the forthcoming machine album does sound very good indeed. Seems like this time it's really going to be worth the wait. :)

17 september. i think we decided on 5 bones. 5 or 10.

rubix: i'm playing a salsa gig downtown san antonio tomorrow. every friday. azuca restaraunt. you should come out. got some other friends coming. always a good hang. and there are always some puerto rican girls in the house to dance with. ! :silly:

I'm pretty sure I'll be out there! Might bring a little handheld Zoom thing and make a bootleg.

Probably will sell for millions! Eat your heart out Buena Vista Social Club! :D
