ADVENTURERS APPLY HERE!

We are in the thick of developing a much improved version of elektron-users.com, and would like your help! A central feature of the new site is the Infobank, which contains documentation, frequently asked questions, tips, and little-known lore about Elektron machines.

Over the last year, the forum has accumulated many thousands of posts. Within those posts, many gems of knowledge lie buried. If only a few intrepid miners would be willing to uncover them. If only ...

Do you feel adventurous enough to delve into the depths of the forums? If so, please let us know! You could have an influence on the Infobank, and make elektron-users.com 2.0 a much better place ;)

Thank you, ok maybe some graphics and colour scheme more closely related to the actual machines?

aint no misty blue hues on my MD!
keep up the nice work :]

I feel like I remember some gems, I will try and dig them up.

definitely include my photo essay about building cables and snakes.

also, the wisefire makshift granular style UW trick, that was good.

the thread with all the studio pics?

mos def, milk! there are some threads that we should archive, and that should be numero uno on the list. maybe the sysex and midi questions that have come up lately should also go under the FAQ. . .

i'm so white.

gggooodddwwiiinnn --

given your expertise with all things elektron, you should think about gathering the known bugs (pretty please!). I'm afraid I wouldn't know the difference between real and fake bugs since my "bugs" are usually due to user error!
