User locations

Might be helpful to have a subforum where each thread could be dedicated to a big city, small country, region of a larger country, etc. Then anyone interested in mentioning where they live can post there in case other EU members are nearby and want to hang/jam/come to gigs/etc.

Obviously you'd want to limit posts to general location info, but even this much would make it easier for sociable Elektron users to find each other.

Yah, I support this post.

I would REALLY like to be able to organize stuff with fellow Elektronians in my decrepit burg (NYC).

Get together, make songs in person, stuff like that.

When musicians come together, good stuff happens.

I'm a GIS analyst by trade and could compile a KML/KMZ for use in Google Earth and/or Maps. I'd just need a table of the Lat/Long coordinates of each user's location.

I've never done an actual Google Maps mashup, but I could create the data if someone else is savvy in that regard...

Located in Boston, btw. :)

Thanks for the offer Gys, that's a good approach too... Probably should do both the subforum and map once enough people show interest.

Hi ! I'm changing location, from Paris to Berlin in 2 weeks. Yeah ! I'm looking for a shared flat but what would be awesome, is to share a flat with some electronic/synth/elektron fan. If you are aware of something please notice me !

EDIT : and if someone would like to have a drink with me in Berlin to share some thought I would be pleased !

on my android device I've noticed Google maps location services cant be turned off. Well you can turn FORCE turn off, but immediatly it starts again. It's constantly updating my position.

This is even when not using google maps, google earth, whatever else. It's makes me feel uneasy that google knows exactly where I am every minute of the day. When I stop applications being able to use GPS, google maps location service then finds out where you are by network positioning.

A little too warm right now and the ocean is full of things that kill you. But hey a place is what you make it.

this is the closest thing to an 'introduce yourself' thread i can see so... hi :U

i live up in the north rockies in Tumbler Ridge, BC, where I work in a library.
Been making music for a while, guitar for like 6 or 7 years now, drums for probably 5, electronic shit for probably 4 or 5.
I'm also a mod over on IDMforums.com.

I'm angling to buy a machinedrum among other gear soon so I joined up to scope sweet deals in the buy and trade section and become properly indoctrinated in the Cult of the Elektron :U

planning on pairing up an MDmk2 UW+ with a DSI Mopho to make some nasty-ass industrial-noise-EBM-glitch type stuff.
Also getting a MOTU 828mk2 for my interface/mixer. Haven't decided on monitors yet, but probably some lower-mid range ones like Rokits or something.

At the moment i just run a crappy soundblaster, Ableton Live and Renoise, with a launchpad, a homebrew arduinome(sadly not my own work, i bought it without a case and housed it in some ghetto tupperwear) and some other random junk that I don't have with me because I left it in Ontario when i moved.

so hi ya'll wassup :U
